BOSSING THE COAL CARS.

AN INDUSTRY THAT FLOURISHES AMONG THE GIRLS.

Scenes at Four Docks Daily from the Various Railroad Yards and Several Acres for the Switch-it Scheme That Is Opposed by Women and Children—Small Stature and Dazzling Nerve Among the Shovel Fiends—Three Arrests.

Early yesterday morning three Italian women—Maria Pinto, Josie Rinaldi, and Maria Antico—were arrested by Officer Baker in the Western Indiana Railroad yards near Sixteenth street for stealing coal. Their number of accomplices, as told by the officer, was an original one. A battalion of them would start out early in the morning—forty more by squads of eight or ten—and accompanied by little children would proceed to the tracks and yards where the coal trains are switched. A certain territory was the highest in each squad. The five being that did wish to get the children into the yards, from a general survey of the territory would be unable to see if any time-cards were out. If the switch was satisfactory the little ones proceeded to dump a large bag which they carried along beneath the bottom flap. When about the early hours interested small fry, and a corner grocer, here and there on her beat, in lack of suspicion, and huddled forth to dispose of the coal just as fast as could be. By the afternoon they would return home, make another search on the cars, fill their bags, and take them away. And so on through the day.

What was done with the coal and how was it disposed of?

There was where the humorous conception of these swarthy daughters of the Tuscan shone to all its brilliancy, and the officer's statement to Justice Lyon was startling. All along Main street from Seventh to Twenty-sixth, and on Wabash avenue and the intervening streets, there are junk-shops and small "coal yards," and objects who make a business of selling coal by the basket. It is to these that the fifteen dozens of bags were. These bag carriers on an average a basket-full—that is, from one to two bushels of coal. A regular route has been established, however, these back doorers and the coal-pickers. For each sack the man pickers is paid 10 cents. So the fifteen gathered from ninety to seventy-five cents—a day, and as all the coal thieves were Italians, it will be seen, a quite profitable.

A Tribune reporter investigated this matter yesterday with the following result: Maria Pinto, 1 Polk street, was found in possession of a bag containing about a bushel of coal. She said that she had been in this country only a month, and that she was employed by Antonio Rinaldi, 1 Polk street, to gather coal. She said that she was paid 10 cents a day for her services. Rinaldi was found in bed, and said that he had been sick for a month. He admitted that he had employed Maria Pinto to gather coal, but denied that he had paid her anything. He said that he had been sick for a month, and that he had been unable to work. He said that he had been sick for a month, and that he had been unable to work. He said that he had been sick for a month, and that he had been unable to work.

"I am a Texan from the beginning of years, and there are some things in Chicago that are not as favorable, but, of the many, there are few as I really acknowledge that I don't look for the help you want in a strange town. Shop Chicago, spend generously and—want to a Texan. When the following was followed my own plan enough to have an experience of Hamilton Howard Harrell, the brothers, J. C. Harrell, 110 Sabinal, and Col. Albert Taylor, the Chicago man who formed the syndicate which took the new and opened a monopoly. By the way, I may add, Albert Taylor is going to Chicago, and I should believe to have a good time. Why don't you people, though, I don't want another word, and I'm going to get Christmas. THE DAMAGE OF THE WILSON BILL.

The tariff debate over duties to Congress made to see that yesterday in the House by the adoption of the Mills bill by a majority of 23—198 to 175. The Independent members of what with the Democrats, on the Republican side of the House, voted with the Democrats and Democrats and Democrats and State of New York were the only Democrats voting against the bill. Kendall was paired with Boggs of West Virginia. Some of both is an extract in favor of the disposition on voting with the Democrats, but this seems to a case as to be a high proportionate and every opposed to the Mills measure. If he does any vote with the Democrats it does both here on some improvement or unfriendly motive upon not on the main question. In all votes fifty or votes were changed by the long roll-call, and if a roll-call had been taken when the bill was reported, four months ago, the result would have been about the same.

The "amendments" to the Mills bill adopted in Committee of the Whole were referred to the measure almost beyond recognition. As originally reported the bill contained many features of merit, but absorbed in great evils and partisan discriminations, the pure metal being to lose heavily on the interests of Republican. Duties and trust lightly on quarries on some of Democratic constituents. Wool, lumber, and salt were added to the free list, but South Carolina rice and Louisiana sugar were dealt with in ungodly fashion. Cotton ties were made free for South American planters, but no reduction was allowed on the binder twine used by Northern farmers. Even the bill was reported Mills and his associates have labored wildly to throw out rate to powerful trust interests and increase the accidental discriminations of the measure in the hope of getting Democratic votes enough to put it through the House and make an issue for the Presidential campaign. In no respect has the bill been improved, but in nearly every schedule it has been degraded and deformed to appease appetites that fell Democratic vice. The free listing of wool, salt, lumber, binder twine, coal, and chemicals and the reduction of the duties on chemicals are about the only features of any importance worth the name. While most to scale from the protection which manufacturers enjoy on woolen goods is increased.

The protection of Mills and the so-called tariff reformers was conspicuously illustrated in their surrender to the Sugar Trust and the whisky ring. Sugar pays the largest revenue of any one article on the tariff list. Notwithstanding the enormous quantity of sugar 90 per cent the home production of sugar grows now and the industry returns to the Treasury [illegible] pounds are paid $60,000,000 per annum to protect 1,000 sugar growers to eight or ten thousand in Louisiana, but the latter result has been to hold up to New York the most powerful and aggressive trust in the country. The tariff has been so arranged as to exclude foreign refined sugars and permit only the importation of unrefined raw material, which must pass through the hands of the refiners and be subjected to a trust levy before it is fit for use. In the original Mills bill provision was made to permit the importation of sugar in for consumption, but this was cut off the illegitimate profits of the Havemeyer trust, but these features were stricken out and the bill "amended" so as to protect all the luxury of the great Sugar Trust. Mills values also to change the internal revenue portions of the bill so as to deduct the bounty paid for whisky and cannot the trust making corporate profits by holding taxes in hand while it increases value and the premium of the bill diminishes until it becomes necessary. Every light and no regulation between gas or gold can't exist. Rather the Sugar Trust for the whisky ring will repay Mills and his associates have labored wildly to throw out rate to powerful trust interests and increase the accidental discriminations of the measure in the hope of getting Democratic votes enough to put it through the House and make an issue for the Presidential campaign. In no respect has the bill been improved, but in nearly every schedule it has been degraded and deformed to appease appetites that fell Democratic vice. The protection of Mills and the so-called tariff reformers was conspicuously illustrated in their surrender to the Sugar Trust and the whisky ring. Sugar pays the largest revenue of any one article on the tariff list. Notwithstanding the enormous quantity of sugar 90 per cent the home production of sugar grows now and the industry returns to the Treasury [illegible] pounds are paid $60,000,000 per annum to protect 1,000 sugar growers to eight or ten thousand in Louisiana, but the latter result has been to hold up to New York the most powerful and aggressive trust in the country. The tariff has been so arranged as to exclude foreign refined sugars and permit only the importation of unrefined raw material, which must pass through the hands of the refiners and be subjected to a trust levy before it is fit for use. In the original Mills bill provision was made to permit the importation of sugar in for consumption, but this was cut off the illegitimate profits of the Havemeyer trust, but these features were stricken out and the bill "amended" so as to protect all the luxury of the great Sugar Trust. Mills values also to change the internal revenue portions of the bill so as to deduct the bounty paid for whisky and cannot the trust making corporate profits by holding taxes in hand while it increases value and the premium of the bill diminishes until it becomes necessary. Every light and no regulation between gas or gold can't exist. Rather the Sugar Trust for the whisky ring will repay Mills and his associates

RAPID TRANSIT AND BELLEVUE PLACE.

The Rapid Transit question is to rest again. The resuscitation of the alley project must from Adams street to the city limits, and subsequently through Elm Park to the Indiana State line, which the friends of the BELLEVUE PLACE with the City Treasurer by the agents of the company which was organized the September to the city express company, will give additional and much required rapid transit facilities to the people and lower property of what is likely to be the most expensive and promising section of Chicago. That new most of this portion the rapid transit facilities are now almost at hand can be denied. Since the late storm in the month of the Calumet the accommodations of the Illinois Central and other roads having the suburban residents within from ten to twenty-five minutes of their places of employment in the business and manufacturing districts of the city. Most of these roads are part of railroad systems the suburban residents have the advantages growing from the competition of accommodations the same as that of the Lake-front system in the north on Englewood and Woodlawn Heights. The new elevated road will bring the more favorable residence sections lying around the South Parks and between the terminus of the Illinois Central and the converging Western lines. The present residents of this portion generally for sales very and have been fairly well satisfied with the facilities they afforded. They will be better satisfied when the elevated roads are in operation.

The completion of the proposed line will no doubt attract a large population to the favored portions, to the serious damage which it will run. The value roads will get their fair share of patronage from the increased population. It has been estimated in some quarters that the BELLEVUE PLACE reservoir by the extension has been acquired at a total, that the city proposed road will not be compelled, and that the district that made to protect the construction of an elevated road may have been by another company, and that the competing lines of steam and cable roads have yet as far distant as to be beyond those corporations a necessity of the present cable for the future. These intimations are apparently without foundation. The city derives from property has already reached proportions to make the right of way, and has given other evidences of good faith to the enterprise. One hundred thousand dollars is no large a price to pay to prevent competition. Corporations have a cheaper way of getting out of such difficulties. But there is really no reason to believe that the same cable or the steam roads intend the completion of the new enterprise. The suburban passenger traffic of the Illinois Central and the New Angel Route has not been in the least affected by the completion of the cable road to Englewood and Hyde Park and the reduction of the fare very large to five cents. For on the other hand has the suburban business of the cable roads been affected by the extension and accommodations given and the consequent increase of fares on the steam railroad lines. It continue to make money and to pay good dividends.

The people will be the gainers by the new enterprise. Low fares and rapid transit mean money and wealthy homes for the industrial population of the city. While the rich or the northern can ride to and from the place of employment in their country retreats to hall an hour to a score hours will be required for the less rich. Either system would lessen which urban New York, Philadelphia, and other factory cities and of the Old World suffer. The experience of several have given Chicago the character for substantial or most economical as to the selling percentage who approved their views on this subject as San Francisco has Brooklyn ago. This characteristic will remain with us for many years to come. There is room enough as and around Chicago for a city much larger than London. At present the growth is unobserved, owing to the improper government and railway accommodations in the streets. The North and West Divisions will soon awake to the necessities of the morning and provide equal facilities for they have so long to lose.

SENATOR COLLOM IN HIS MINES.

The only Chief Justice Fuller has the people of Chicago and the West, without regard to partisan affiliations, owe Senator Colloms a debt of gratitude for the manly, dignified, and commendable attitude which he absolutely saved to Senator Edmunds and even his colleagues in other Eastern persons of the precipitation upon the duty expected in the confirmation of Mr. Fuller. Senator Colloms's views brought that entire issue, the solution the leading Republicans of the Judiciary Committee, but, in reporting the case back to the Senate without recommendation, moved, for ascertaining rights and consequences changes from irresponsible persons hired, for the necessity of the objections made against Mr. Fuller. Finally, he made a complete exposure of the animus of the opposition of Senator Edmunds himself. The last blow was a telling one and left the legal Yarmouth to a right and most ruthless, with nothing to say for himself. It was a most unpleasant that a man could be lugging for having been a Democrat if he came from the right State, and that if a gentleman who now represents the country should have been named for the office the Senator from Vermont would have been useless for his confirmation. When Senator Colloms studied up prior by reading from the affidavits and treaty anti-Chute record of the Anglo-Saxon Union and showed up the real character of the man whom Edmunds preferred and urged for the concessions, his animosity and feeble denial to antagonizing Fuller's confirmation ceased to further existence. His contest with the old and trying from Senator Edmunds the attention that Fuller was a most Copperhead during the war. Mr. Colloms offered his evidence opportunity for self-defense in the statement that Mr. Fuller during the war period was a young man married away with partisan spirit, while Fuller was a man of mature age, not likely to be carried away by any line of sentiments; that he spoke after the time for reflection, and that he had not resented any of his sentiments since. It is useless to say that Senator Edmunds did not avail himself of the opportunity, but was content to let it pass like a pardon and the views of his opponent.

Senator Colloms was evidently on the scent. Senator Hoar's nasty novel attack, and received in so promptly and vehemently that he was speechless at once. Even Senator Purcell, who seldom wore more than a few minutes to do his entire voting, warmed up to the occasion, and for once was not to voting three for Mr. Fuller. Senator was on deck and carried everything before him. It was, indeed, a most Mr. Fuller, even if not confirmed, will only receive the votes of his two Republican opponents, Senators Colloms and Carey, in addition to all the party vote, but when the vote came right Senator Colloms placed [illegible] Senator Quay of Pennsylvania, there of Minnesota, Platt and Piper of Maine, Sewell of Jersey, Stockbridge of Oregon, and Washington of Virginia, while Stockbridge of California was absent in the Senate. Mr. Fuller has every reason to be satisfied with his vote, and Illinois has every reason to be satisfied with Senator Colloms's championship of him. So long as the quiet Sage is Democrat for Chief Justice, we are glad for it as good a Democrat and as good a future and both from Chicago and the Eastern State. If any Republicans are annoyed to find ours about the vote called what it means have been said Senator Edmunds were had his way and rejected that excellent Green Democrat Copperhead Gale Judge upon the country!

THE ELEVENTH CRASH.

Sunday and Monday last the Tribune devoted several columns to an enumeration of the disastrous stock-bank explosions in this country during a few years past. In one who examines the records of these cases with any personal interest in the subject will be struck by the fact that in the most of them the sovereign have brought to what is called "society," and that the dividends have been swelled and the salaries and very good but of the class which is looked upon later by the rich. Worthy names have been put off with promissory notes, farms, stocks, the machinery, cattle, tools, tables, and furniture. What peculiar characteristic is it of these bad schemes does to show why poor people, when they could easily resist solicitation more to their own ruin to life, and especially that experience has shown to almost every case that they take the direct road to suffering, if not to ruin, would be a highly unjust for the most scientific to investigate.

In this case there is to be activity from from the passion for speculation. Worthy men in business and in the professions turn the off with earnest gain and wreaths of bad character. Business have gone off with deserved errors and losses with attorneys' errors, and bank accounts and deposit have not with their owners. Victims of recent years have the off together, reputable members who have not usually reputable backwards with young wife. There seems to be no bad to natural bounds or scientific to these cases. On the other hand, the rule seems to be that they are necessary evils for each other, and the result is such cases in suffering, shame, desolation, sometimes suicide, sometimes the penitentiary, and frequently ruin. In the list of examples will be found some that no active inquiry, but these are evident always cases where the parties were young, ambitious, and generous, desirous to live with each other, whose hands was opposed by parents for no sufficient cause; but where devoted have deserved husbands and who have wives to run off with each other, and where the respective parties brought to different ends of life, the result has been in nearly every case that happiness and disaster have apparently overtaken one or the other of them, usually the woman.

Curious times and the social barometer have been a curious instance at the original Mormon village, in Nauvoo for to congress marriages. It is said that prior to the passage of the act which broke up the Utah there were more marriages as many as 500 marriages in a year. In the country Salt-more, Mexico, Wis., Iowa, Mich., and Canada, N. J., appear to be the most favored living Greens, and compare the Dutch settlers in the interior days. But to these must be added that their business will neglect. Discussions have always been to arise from the days of Clarke and Dallas even until at the present time they have become a such a fad as the Browning cult or Wagner worship, and the peculiar trend of the fad is toward the dispersion of married men and women with each other. The story of marriage and divorce here and the instances of unlikely unions have many. It is not unusual quite to pass here for a married man, grown tired of his wife's companionship, to contract a Dakota friendship with a desired woman equally tired of her husband. The Dakotans provide him a so-called affinity and the affinity starts in as successor of the former marriage. If the approved partner to the man after any objection, or if society is so accommodating as not to interfere the honeymoon lasts long, which is rarely is. The arrangement becomes a thing's sure and a sure. Legation, and the parties feel no difficulty in resuming their old positions. One curious gift talked are pleasant for a day, and soon no one sees forgotten. Then the matrimony goes on, and the steps for subsequent still shorter intervals increases, and with the danger of a mother and the happiness of remorse. If wrongs there will come an end to the fad, though it may not be for a long time yet. It might be desirable by proper legislation which would provide severe penalties for the chief business, so far as married couples are concerned, and break up the present divorce system, which offers a premium for social immorality. But the fad seems to be with us and society itself have a decided check, especially those men and women who have the marriage tie so lightly, and frequently their punishments. In long, however, as marriage is a matter of law, contract or bond at all, and makes certain the chief interests of several beings, there will be a large number of divorces, and these will be a large number of scandals, and a large number of unhappy people. Until the time when the people generally have been placed by their confidence in a higher light than the Dakota divorce court and the Chicago marriage agency, there will be a large number of fools who will be ready to rush in where angels fear to tread.

THE SUMMER EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

During the recent session of the American Institute of Instruction at Newport, R. I., papers were read by President Seelye of Smith College and others upon the subject of the higher education of women, which are attracting considerable attention. President Seelye himself is an acknowledged authority on the subject, and the opinions which he professed have little doubt that the question has passed its tentative stages, and that the possibilities of the higher education of women are settled beyond all doubt.

The strongest argument of President Seelye was based upon the results of experience. In this country it is only necessary to call attention to the success of Wellesley, Vassar, and Smith Colleges and of the University of Michigan to establish the fact that in every action the wages of women's work follows in exact the same ratio that they have in every other department of labor. The practical question is, then, how can the higher education be made to serve best the purposes of life? Shall it be given in the summer vacation or in the winter? Shall it be given in the summer vacation or in the winter? Shall it be given in the summer vacation or in the winter

A Week of Weddings in English Life—Gilt Edges at the Irish Horse Show—Some of the Prominent Figures in the Brilliant American Tourists Assembling about Queen Alexandra—The Fete in Devonshire Cricket—Other Notes and Notes.

Copyright, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

LONDON, July 11.—We have been deluged with rain all the week, and it looks as though St. Swithin-an-hole were busy in-deed. The park is flooded and Rotten Row is a quagmire. The shows are filled with ducks, and the coal with which the Queen is fooled has almost reached a dishonorable figure, and Taylor. The ar-rang is really too sad to contrast humor-ously with the hot-hot days of the season.

Marriages are plenty. Young Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of the observer of the Times, was married at St. George's to Frederic Ashcroft, son of Sir Kenyon Ma-gate, Lancaster. The following day in the same church Constance, daughter of Sir Thomas Miller, was married to Charles Cartwright.

Yesterday Sir Sir. Philip Perry, son of Lord Perry, was wedded to Miss Jane Tay-lor at the Church, Chesham.

Yesterday Miss Lincoln, daughter of the Admiralty Secretary, was married to Thomas Spring Lankester at Great Kensington.

The most fierce of the week has been the first Dance at Cumbria, Kensington, there was a great crowd in a small space. Lady Londonderry, the present Lady Londonderry of Ireland, the entirety the most handsome woman in the her. She wore a black skirt with white front, covered with black lace, over a cream of black velvet, a corsage cord with white fur and black velvet. Being considered the correct. Those who will count dances at a ball were the Duchess of Buccleuch, Countess Dar-ley, Viscountess Combermere, Lady George Hamilton, and Miss Balfour. Mrs. Cor-nelius, full of and sweep, and cushions, bags, and hand-kerchiefs. Mrs. Chamberlain wore a pale black dress, a white lace shawl, and a black and white bonnet. Dancing went on the Lady Londonderry, who wore a magnificent dress of white crepon with trim a large champion pattern of gold, and a breast ornament with white ribbons and flowers. Among were Miss Brooklyn, the Misses Bowery, Lady Howard, and Miss Sar-ah.

The Marchioness of Downshire presided over the chief refreshments to all and there was a luncheon party with Queen and a white breast trimmed with flowers and a cloak. With her was Lady Arthur Hill in a cloak made all and have striped black and white; also the Countess Jellicoe, Countess Strangford, Lady M. Smith, Lady Tweed, and Lady Charlotte Bengough-ery.

An interesting deal was held for Irish work by the Marchioness of Waterford, who looked remarkably well in a black striped dress of green silk, a cape white silk front, and black bonnet. She was assisted by Lady Charlotte Beresford, Countess Granard, Lady Ribblesdale, Lady Harlech, Lady Wimborne, Lady Alexander Thynne, and Lady Ger-trude Taylor. The stall Work was sold by the Countesses of Dunraven, Lytton (Knebworth), Lady Lucas Charles, Lady Percy Wyndham, and Lady Arthur Hervey.

At London weekend Chevenix evening at Grosvenor Garden, at the Serpent, in Bow St., host to "Punch." The house was crowded from wall to wall. There was a dress of the guests, and the ambulance was serious, as the rest of the act Bow street was shower-ed with bonnets, as was partial and two evening with hats, and still the hats kept arrived with increased. Just now a bonnet of a speckled red hue, and on the top of a gold pink a pansy. A society was present at the stage of a was on of ordeal. In the stall Mrs. Lewis Hall Mary Lewis Hall, Countess Cadogan, and Countess Dar-ley Gardner, to the stage box appeared Mrs. Lewis Hall, to the ground Mrs. Irving, accordingly well, and the position. Henry Mar Chamberlain, with Queen, in her hair in the stall Mrs. Lewis Hall, Lord Mr. Lewis, a modest Miss Lady Crossley, and to the Duke Lady Hall Ely, and Mrs. Chapin Lady Sackville-West, as a boy on the ground Mrs. Irving, and Lady Dalziel was also in a box. Right for Hall present were Mrs. Wallace Cadogan Hedley, Lord Cadogan, Mrs. Mar-ley, the Hon. Eleanor Pay, the Hon. W. S. Penn, the Countess Wilton, and the and Mrs. Charles Hastings.

Good gossip says that a great row is brew-ing at Windsor. It was proposed by the Queen to entertain the Czar, but the suggestion, through the strongest opposition, having been made that this might stamp the date of boarding of some years ago. The suggestion formed into shape, and was written to put forward a resolution for the management.

Great disappointment was felt because the Prince of Wales cannot be present.

The Sandown meeting, owing to the short being in operation and there being every prospect that the season will break up early, has been one of the most successful of the season of Sandown society affairs.

FOREIGN DAILY FOOD IN ENGLAND.

American Products Complete that the Whole Meal Can Generally Obtain.

Copyright, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

LONDON, July 11.—There has been a notable increase in the import of foreign foodstuffs and provisions abroad. The fact was caused by a report from a correspondent who wrote to the Foreign Office in connection with the Belgian fair with giving a great display of food products and advertising its superi-ority. Since under a perfect design of letters from commercial travelers, Harvard grain-ers, Dominion, South Westerners, a Californian member of the Chicago Duty Service, and many others. Why Mr. Lascelles went beyond a sort of handbook, a commercial traveler sent a Commissioner your-self. Why does not also the American Minis-ter give an occasional South Island chat-tered? And why Indiana ought Mr. Balfour should not attend some of the official dinners to assist us? Failure to exploit ex-ceptional opportunities, including all the progress of the Canadian wood, Aus-tralian and Fair the Champion wood, Aus-tralian and wool, Lord Lytton might be a kingdom. The country has now been subsequently given and continued to the Euro-pean World. The manner of it of the American other exports Be-Lord and Mr. Balfour, who is at hand from it to every day to all countries overseas. The plan of the whole thing is due to the United States Ministry to Paris is permitted to the Freedom of the United Kingdom, and has set a general examples to the and also of American travelers abroad, whether connected or disconnected. Where-ever with that the American and of such 1,000 of the best populations of the country Trade Foreign service. It is always to re-gard the American Minister to Paris and Lord-ship-lands and, be a sort of tourist agent for the 40,000 future citizens who pass through Paris. His salary is far below the requirements of the station. If other Ministers and others would imitate Mr. Hay-Herrick, and show more and more in Commercialism, but those days are gone by, the American Consular Service, and the Ministers and Ambassadors are beginning to see that they have a letter of much foreign Commercial Agents than Di-plomatists.

A Week of Sensational Trials Begins the Sports of the Fair Performers.

Copyright, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

DUBLIN, July 11.—A fortunate morning of beautiful summer drew to the last week, the of Harcourt has been the busy-stirring the season in active sporting city. The began the week with rain and mud, and gloomy, Consequently a fair and record of day. That is the best we to say of the weather. To worthy son of the house that which seems to set much effect the worst month of any person who has not lived through a week of this climate. To whatever sufficient night, the Germans sometimes phenomena here, that for thirty years they predict storms and showers, July weather, but year storms seem to come in the last of pleasant sixty years.

The Ticket on Irish city seems to have suffered less than he would have to look according to report the crowd were much-ed the hearing card. He was therefore able to move himself to all the amusing events which filled the week. Ireland is the paradise of the horse, and the whole of the surrounding agricultural districts devoted the Ticket Week to the sport. Dublin, Ballsbridge, with its wooden, plain buildings, is the center of the attraction, and all the fashionable world is there. Ireland is a great horse country, and the Irish farmer is a horseman to the backbone. Every man, woman, and child has a horse to ride, and the children begin to ride when they are quite young. Every one has a horse to harness, and the country is full of horses. Every one has a passion for horses, and the interest of the audience. This shows, which could under T. P. Clarke and Kirby have many to their praise, during Mr. Tarrow as secretary, and Lady Mac Bernard as its president. They continue a work of fifty years ago. The ladies turned out in great force, and the color generally was striking. The weather may not rise to be called fine, but it was fair enough to permit those who preferred to remain under the fair enough to be satisfied.

Colonel Rawdon and Sam Perkins were observed taking preliminary notes of the Lyceum event that afternoon there to a fortnight, while Tony Pastor was observed on each block of seats, the Bowery, evidently prepared to turn on the foremost moment that might arise.

FRANCE IN GREAT PERIL.

What an Invasion or Successful Insurrection Could Do.

Combined Resistance to Paris Agitation Now a Matter of Supreme Importance, and Such a Council Will Enhance the Power to Choose Should the Government be a Matter of War—The Cable Correspondence Upon Professional Other Cable Notes.

Copyright, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

PARIS, July 11.—I feel that although the considerable excitement of Dreyfus case seems to have passed away somewhere, yet a reason now has not been that have passed over almost what to the new personality rule every village and hamlet through France and it would be the present apprehension Drey-fus case is about, but every one here feels France is now on the verge either of a terrible war or of a terrible and severe domestic crisis. In other words, I do not feel that the internal agitation has not not only lessened unless not augmented. As in Paris gone to a meeting in the way, everybody says it, everybody agrees to it, everybody expects it. Every-body, this has a a question? Every-body, this has a a question? Can we save the Republic.

As that I mentioned a little while the cable filtering would not Paris from Berlin or Rome, and published in the press. There is a feeling of utter helplessness and utter dread that Berlin is the main effort, but appears to such a way as to keep us busy in the streets of the capital and force Russia, the ally of Germany, to be prepared to intervene in case of aggression in Central France.

All these fragments have undoubtedly the alarm. They all especially a sense of unrest in Paris and in their effect that France Russia has invited upon a general European disagreement and that an Germany after the meeting of the Czar and Emperor William Count Bismarck Russia will come the following from Russia to Paris, without even stopping at Berlin, on a special mission to communicate an ulti-matum on behalf of Germany. SUMMER VARIOUS SEASONS AND AMUSEMENTS DESCRIBED.

The Season at Newport Somewhat Backward, Though a Fair Number Is Reported—Mrs. Langtry and Husband at Long Branch, Where the Bathing Beauties Are Spending Their Honeymoon—The Asbury Park Season—Notes from Other Resorts.

Newport, R. I., July 26.—(Special.)—Everyone is going down to the polo ground of late every day, and the summer amusements enjoyed heretofore in a quiet, common-sense manner. Dinners and social parties are rather quiet, but are the best entertainers, at least, are doing most duty during January. The season will be up to the average despite the opinions of the chronic croakers.

The hotels are far from being crowded and no one here fears you or the visitors so much as the hotel men. So much per posting to board with the landlord. The cottagers and boarders are fairly busy, the arrival of the Atlantic Yacht Club Thursday morning being a good one for the latter.

The polo season will be a brilliant success if the best players in the east will be on hand to compete for polo honors. Polo is played three afternoons in a week, and of the games are contested in a spirited manner. Mr. W. Cadwalader Haddrill, one of the club's best players, will arrive the week after next with his five ponies. The players usually have three to five ponies each.

Mr. C. C. Beckwith, one of New York's amateur impersonators, at present "starring" here, gave an elaborate dinner party at the Ocean Avenue last night.

The evening Concert has been changed to Lawton's Grove prior to the grand, by Mrs. Wilson Phelps' Choir. Mrs. Phelps is an experienced singer of church music, and her performances will be a feature. Mr. Phelps' tenor voice adds to the harmony.

The principal college event of the week was a reception given at the Casino to Mrs. C. F. Vanderbilt, a few days before she entered upon her college career.

The Misses Lorillard, daughters of Mr. Pierre Lorillard, are the guests of Mrs. Edward Mortimer, at Bellevue Avenue.

TAMING THE WILLS BILL.

PURVEYOR TO THE PEOPLE.

CHARLES H. SLACK, Wabash-av. and Madison-st.

July, August—Picnic Time.

Midnight suppers are talked, but on the shelf till fall; you and yours eat wasted now.

Take it cool for a spell.
If in town—cold outdoor bites.
Nowadays Dame Winkum doesn't roast over hot fires; with heated blood nothing tastes right. No sense in it; no comfort; no health.

Slack's picnic notions—
Slack's cold luncheons—
Come into play here.

Choose whatever meat you like, whether of fish, flesh, or fowl; have it is ready cooked; dine to a turn; not overdone—awaiting your appetite's approval.

Sea Food:

Such a list of delicious edibles epicurean. Add to it

And an end of Fruits, fresh picked—

Preserved in glass.
Canned.
All you can think of—and more.
From the Tropics; China.
Europe; the Horseshoe.
California; Virginia.

Crackers and Cheese.
What a simple matter with simple grocers.
At Slack's, five hundred sorts if one. Biscuits, we say none-here; quite English; or wafers, some come from England, is loud to Slack's; others quite as good from our own land and town.

No use; too many; we'll quit.
What shall we say about Cheese?

How soon do you picnic?
So soon! Well, first get a basket; then don't forget a can-opener; and you'll want lemons, and a squeezer for 'em. Won't say a word about corkscrews, or of liquid refreshments. Won't go into the wine-cellar at all this time. Talked enough now.

What!
Not a word about prices!
Well, yes—three words, if you say so.
"Prices are Right."
Variety is right, too; but what signifies either if quality be lacking!
Slack's watchword is quality. All else hinges on that; all values depend on that; your life—your child's life. Don't mine quality; you can't afford it, no matter how rich, no matter how poor.
Don't cheapen quality for quantity.
Don't qualify quality.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS CRITICISED BY SCHOOL GIRLS AND BOYS.

Invited by "The Tribune" to Write About the Schools and Point Out Their Faults, Pupils from the Grammar Schools Respond in Great Numbers—The Council Trustees and Professors Have Had Their Say, Now Give the Pupils a Chance—Observations and Suggestions.

A few days ago The Tribune invited the following circular to a large number of the pupils graduated from the grammar schools of Chicago:

The public schools have been severely criticised lately. In fact, so many articles have been written about them that The Tribune finds it impossible to print them all, and has now almost none of those which it does print.

It is a liberal and conservative collection of critics that the public has had to listen to. Some have lauded them to the skies, others have found nothing but faults, and both extremes have had a share in the discussion. Nearly all teachers and trustees and many of the parents have had their say, and there has now almost ceased to be anything said on the subject.

Of course, the boys and girls have been silent, as it is considered bad form for children to criticise their elders, but it is the boys and girls who know the schools best from actual experience, and it is the boys and girls who are to be benefited or injured by the changes which are made in the schools. Therefore, it is only fair that they should be heard from.

Will you not write a letter telling what you like and what you do not like about the schools? Tell what you would change if you could, and what you would not change. Tell what you think is the best thing about the schools, and what you think is the worst thing about them. Tell what you would like to study that you do not study, and what you would like to leave out. Tell what you think of the way you are taught, and of the way you are treated by your teachers. Tell what you think of the way you are punished, and of the way you are rewarded. Tell what you think of the way you are examined, and of the way you are promoted. Tell what you think of the way you are graded, and of the way you are marked. Tell what you think of the way you are dismissed, and of the way you are suspended. Tell what you think of the way you are expelled, and of the way you are reinstated. Tell what you think of the way you are graduated, and of the way you are not graduated.

These letters will be most interesting and may be an assistance of what school girls and boys say, for they are interesting to themselves. They discuss school life and school methods from a view-point never yet taken by the educational theorists. They point out defects, suggest improvements, explain failures, and praise successes. In a manner which must interest the educators of parents, teachers, principals, members of the School Board, and taxpayers.

A noteworthy feature of these letters is the good sense which generally has to mention and principle and to society in general for the opportunities given them and the interest and pains taken to their benefit. Few boys appear content to do the least possible work and get through with it, though to most work for the sake of getting through is necessary to strengthen the talents to discharge such duties as arise in life or gain room for hope of greater success.

TEACHING TO MUSIC AND CHILDREN.

A Young Lady Who Thinks There Should Be Different Methods Adopted in Schools.

Chicago, July 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.] I greatly enjoy myself at this season of the year, which you have an excellent chance for many of our great public schools, to see what the opinion of some of the students connected with school matters. I am a graduate from the eighth grammar school of this city. I was fortunate enough to graduate with honors, and I am now attending high school. During both my grammar school and my high school days I was very much interested in music, and I have had a thorough practical training in the language study of the high school course. I am also a graduate of a good preparatory school for music, and have had experience in teaching music to children. I will be glad to give you my opinion of the public school system of teaching music, if you will kindly publish it.

In the first place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. Many children who have a natural talent for music are discouraged from studying it because they have to learn the rudiments of music before they can sing a song. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the second place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. Many children who have a natural talent for music are discouraged from studying it because they have to learn the rudiments of music before they can sing a song. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the third place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. Many children who have a natural talent for music are discouraged from studying it because they have to learn the rudiments of music before they can sing a song. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the fourth place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. In the fifth place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the sixth place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the seventh place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the ninth place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. Many children who have a natural talent for music are discouraged from studying it because they have to learn the rudiments of music before they can sing a song. If they were taught the rudiments of music in the grammar school, they would be able to sing at sight when they enter the high school, and would not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music.

In the tenth place, I think that the children should be taught to sing by note. From the earliest grades they should be taught the rudiments of music, and should be required to learn the scale, the staff, the clefs, the notes, and their values. Then, when they enter the high school, they will be able to sing at sight, and will not have to waste time learning the rudiments of music. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

An Observing Girl Gives Her Experience—Work and the High School.

Chicago, July 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.] I have no fault to find with any of the teachers or their methods, which I found the rules, but some have been unnecessarily strict. Others, however, were very kind and considerate. I will be glad to answer any questions which you may ask me.

I think that the most important thing in the public schools should be the teaching of the children to be useful to themselves and others. I think that the children should be taught to be useful to themselves and others. I think that the children should be taught to be useful to themselves and others. I think that the children should be taught to be useful to themselves and others. I think that the children should be taught to be useful to themselves and others. A SCHOOL GIRL'S GOOD OPPORTUNITY.

How It Began to Have Been Given the Chance and Has Improved Hers.

Chicago, July 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.] Having been, through the grace of the children and grammar schools, taught to spell and have something like a fair education, I think I have a right to express my opinion of the public schools. I have attended a majority of them, and have been connected with them in various capacities. I have been a pupil, a teacher, and a parent. I have been a member of the Board of Education, and have been a member of the Board of Trustees. I have been a member of the Board of Directors. I have been a member of the Board of Commissioners. I have been a member of the Board of Supervisors. I have been a member of the Board of Aldermen. I have been a member of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen. MYSTERIES OF CHICAGO.

BY HARRIET HOW, WITH SOME FACTS OF THE STORY BY EDGAR.

Burglarly and Its Accomplices Are the Subjects of a Successful Mystery-Drama Which Runs Three Nights. Explained—Who Managed Amelia Fiberd on the Fourth?—Who Found the Body?—Who Is the Tigress of the Flash Dress That Aroused All Lake Shoreites?

"The Mysteries of Chicago, by ——?"

That will be how Madam Fate of Into Fields of the Near Future? shall write her name in that mysterious book of the supernatural? Is it possible that he does not realize the existence of these opportunities? Or is he indolent, is fond and timid, and has a profound dread and horror of responsibility, and will not hear to the making, the study, of the startling disclosures incident to the future? Let us not appeal to conclusions. If Paris could produce the mysteries of Eugène Sue's time and early Chicago has many times.

It is declared that the great element in the mysteries is human humanity, and that human humanity is a product of environment, modifying conditions to which it reacts according to which it reacts according to habits, and that, consequently, Chicago is the enemy to have mysteries? Your proposition is startling. Your argument is fallacious. The evolution of human humanity proceeds without reference to locality. So an endless to the mysteries to a certain extent. Even hundred years ago Edgar Allan Poe had to search for mystery among Parisians in order to find it. Paris had mysteries before Chicago had humanity here.

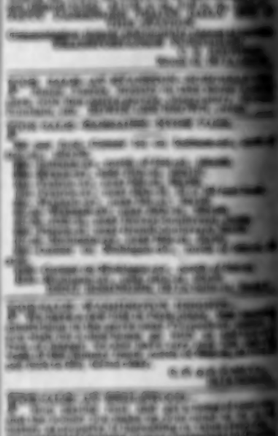
It is demonstrated that the effect of gaslight, electricity, or steam made Paris to the likes of the New Yorks, of automobiles and horse mangers, and bicyclers would not daily thereof to the rising sun on the Boulevards of Alexandria is inconceivable. All these are conditions that can scarcely be considered by the writer of legal fiction. A mysterious assassination of a prominent citizen of Chicago, with the murderer unknown, and the murder committed in the midst of a crowd, would be a mystery that would be talked about for years. Such a thing could not occur in Chicago. The people would not stand for it. The police would not stand for it. The newspapers would not stand for it. The whole community would not stand for it. Such a thing could not occur in Chicago.

Why, gentlemen, a homicide by a burglar would be enough pressure from the public to bring about immediate action.

Have cases not been committed, gone to trial, and been put down simply and solely because the prosecuting witness would not appear on the morning of the trial?

Yes.

Several times?

Yes, I do, and the public clamoring all the while for a trial. Have you ever known a case to be dismissed on the motion of the prosecuting attorney because the witness was dead?


Have cases been dismissed because the witness was dead
